100. Explain the concept of culture and discuss why is it important to study for understanding (p. 40) consumer behavior.

Culture is the complex whole that includes knowledge, belief, art, law, morals, customs, and any other capabilities and habits acquired by humans as members of society. It is important to study culture for several reasons. First, culture is a comprehensive concept and includes almost everything that influences an individual's thought processes and behaviors. Second, culture is acquired. It does not include inherited responses and predispositions, and since much of human behavior is learned rather than innate, culture does affect a wide array of behaviors. Third, the complexity of modern societies is such that culture seldom provides detailed prescriptions for appropriate behavior. Instead, in most industrial societies, culture supplies boundaries within which most individuals think and act. Finally, the nature of cultural influences is such that we are seldom aware of them. One behaves, thinks, and feels in a manner consistent with other members of the same culture because it seems "natural" or "right" to do so. Thus, it is important to study culture for understanding consumer behavior because it is pervasive and influences consumers' behavior, often in ways they are unaware of. Marketers must understand this influence to effectively serve customers' needs and desires.

102. Jason is planning a business trip to Japan, and it is his first time doing business in that country.

(p. 43-48) Discuss some value differences between Japanese culture and American culture that are most relevant to him in a business meeting situation.

One key area where there are substantial differences between the Japanese and American cultures is the area of "other-oriented" values. Individualism is a defining characteristic of American culture, whereas the Japanese are more collective in their orientation. While American society is clearly youth oriented, many Asian cultures have traditionally valued the wisdom that comes with age. Cultures with more masculine and individualistic orientations such as the U.S.

tend to value competitiveness and demonstrate it openly, but collectivists cultures, even highly masculine ones such as Japan, tend to find openly competitive gestures offensive as they cause others to "lose face." Finally, Japan and other collectivist cultures tend to place a strong value on uniformity and conformity, whereas other cultures, such as the U.S., value diversity more.

Another area where there are differences between the Japanese and American cultures is the area of "self-oriented" values. Americans are much more prone than the Japanese to take an action-oriented approach to problems.

103. Name the seven factors influencing nonverbal communications and describe four of them. (p. 52-59)

Nonverbal factors influencing nonverbal communications include: time, space, symbols, relationships, agreements, things, and etiquette. Students can discuss any four of the following:

- a. Time--The meaning of time varies between cultures in two major ways: time perspective, which is a culture's overall orientation toward time, and the interpretations assigned to specific uses of time. Time perspectives can be monochronic (i.e., one thing at a time, promptness, adhering to plans, etc.) or polychronic (i.e., doing many things at once, committed to relationships, change plans often, etc.).
- b. Space--Personal space is the nearest that others can come to you in various situations without your feeling uncomfortable, and this space varies among cultures.
- c. Symbols--Colors, animals, shapes, numbers, and music have varying meaning across cultures.
- d. Relationships--While Americans form relationships and make friends quickly and easily and drop them easily also, in many other parts of the world, relationships and friendships are formed slowly and carefully because they imply deep and lasting obligations. Chinese relationships are complex and described under the concept of guanxi.
- e. Agreements--Americans rely on an extensive and, generally, highly efficient legal system for ensuring that business obligations are honored or for resolving disagreements. Many other cultures have not developed such a system and rely instead on relationships, friendship, and kinship, local moral principles, or informal customs.
- f. Things--The different meanings that cultures attach to things, including products, make gift-giving a particularly difficult task.
- g. Etiquette--represents generally accepted ways of behaving in social situations. Behaviors considered rude and obnoxious in one culture may be quite acceptable in another. Meishi in Japan (i.e., the exchange of business cards) is an important part of Japanese business etiquette.

104. List and describe the three trends in the global youth market.

(p. 60-61)

Several recent trends in the global youth market are critical for global marketers to understand.

These include:

• Technology is Mainstream--Wired teens are a global phenomenon not restricted to developed countries. Fifty six percent of teens globally are "superconnectors," meaning they use two or more electronic devices (e.g., cell phone and Internet) daily.

• US Teens No Longer Lead the Way--Now it's more about mind set and the "creatives" are leading the way. Creatives are most prevalent in Europe (not the US), are open to new ideas, and like expressing themselves in various ways including personal web pages and art.

• US Brands are Not Currently the Leaders--US brands used to be the leaders among global teens. Now the top three are Sony (Japan), Nokia (Finland), and Adidas (Germany).

- 105. List and explain four of the seven factors that Unilever utilizes in order to successfully sell its (p. 67) laundry products globally.
 - Cultural Homogeneity--In the global laundry market, heterogeneity, even within a country, can occur. For example, Brazil's Northeast and Southeast regions are very different. One difference is that in the poorer Northeast region, most laundry is done by hand and more bar soap than powder is used. In the more affluent Southeast region, most laundry is done in a washing machine and more powder detergent is used than bar soap in the process.
 - Needs--Hand washing versus machine washing leads to different laundry product needs. In addition, in developing countries which are an important focus for Unilever, products must be adapted to meet strength of cleaning needs related to removing sweat, odors, and tough stains due to physical labor.
 - Affordability--Clearly affordability is a component in pricing the laundry detergents themselves to be competitive. However, Unilever also faces the situation that a transition from hand washing to washing machines depends in large part on the economic prosperity of a country or region, as this determines the affordability of washing machines. Adoption of washing machines, in turn, changes the type and amounts of laundry products used as we saw earlier.
 - Relevant Values--One source indicates that cleanliness, convenience, and sustainability are key value aspects in laundry products that vary across culture. In many countries where Unilever operates there are segments of kids dubbed "Nintendo Kids" who don't tend to go outside and play and thus don't get dirty. A core strategy for a number of their brands in these markets is the "dirt is good" campaign that stresses that playing and getting dirty are part of a healthy child's development...and "let Unilever worry about getting their clothes clean."
 - Infrastructure--A broad infrastructure issue in laundry is access to hot water. Many in developing countries don't have access to hot water or large quantities of water. Unilever responded in India with Surf Excel Quick Wash, an enzyme-based product that uses less water and works under lower water temperatures.

Consumer Behavior Building Marketing Strategy 12th Edition Hawkins Test Bank

• Communication--Europeans have traditionally cleaned their clothes in much hotter water with the logic being that "boiling clothes" is the only real way to get them clean and kill germs. This trend is reversing as Unilever pushes more environmental friendly products and as Europeans have begun to wash in cooler temperatures to save energy. An interesting consequence of the shift is that antibacterial additives are now demanded by European customers to kill the germs.

• Ethical Implications -- While conversion of the world's consumers to fully automated washing machines would help standardize Unilever's approach, it has major implications for water usage. This is because compared to hand washing, machine washing can, depending critically on the number of rinse cycles needed, use more water. Continued innovation in products toward lower water use will be a key ethical and performance issue for Unilever moving forward.
