76. Define distributive bargaining.

(p. 35)

A competition over who is going to get the most of a limited resource (often money).

77. List two situations when distributive bargaining strategies are useful.

(p. 36)

When a negotiator wants to maximize the value obtained in a single deal and when the relationship with the other party is not important.

78. A negative bargaining range occurs when:

(p. 38)

The seller's resistance point is above the buyer's.

79. How can a negotiation that begins with a negative bargaining range be resolved?

(p. 38)

If one or both parties are persuaded to change their resistance points, or if someone else forces a solution upon them that one or both parties dislike.

80. What can happen when one or both parties do not think they got the best agreement

(p. 40) possible?

One party or the other may try to get out of the agreement later or try to recoup losses or get even.

81. Define bargaining mix.

(p. 41)

The package of issues for negotiation.

82. What are the four important tactical tasks for a negotiator in a distributive bargaining
(p. 44) situation?

(1) Assess the other party's outcome values and the costs of terminating negotiations; (2) manage the other party's impression of one's own outcome values; (3) modify the other party's perception of his or her own outcome values; (4) manipulate the actual costs of delaying or aborting negotiations.

83. List several information sources one can use to indirectly assess the other party's resistance
(p. 44) point.

Making direct observations, consulting readily available documents and publications, talking to knowledgeable experts.

84. What is the simplest way to screen a position?
(p. 46)

Say and do as little as possible.

85. Define calculated incompetence.
(p. 47)

The negotiating agent is not given all of the necessary information, making it impossible for information to be leaked.

86. Define selective presentation.

(p. 47)

Negotiators reveal only the facts necessary to support their case.

87. What negative effect can be caused by using trivial items as distractions or magnifying minor

(p. 48) issues?

The other person may become aware of this maneuver and concede on the minor points, thereby gaining the right to demand equally generous concessions on the central points.

88. What are the three ways to manipulate the costs of delay in negotiation?

(p. 50)

(1) Plan disruptive action; (2) ally with outsiders; (3) manipulate the scheduling of negotiations.

89. Why is it advantageous to make an extreme opening offer?

(p. 52)

Gives more room for movement in negotiation and therefore more time to learn the other party's priorities. May create the impression that there is a long way to go before a reasonable settlement will be achieved and more concessions than originally intended may have to be made to bridge the difference between the two opening positions.

90. What are the disadvantages of making a more extreme opening offer?

(p. 52)

It may be summarily rejected by the other party, communicates an attitude of toughness that may be harmful to long-term relationships.

91. What characteristics of original offer, opening stance and opening concession would signal a position of firmness? Of flexibility?

(p. 53, 54)

Firmness: an extreme original offer, a determined opening stance, and a very small opening concession. Flexibility: a more moderate opening offer, a reasonable cooperative opening stance, and a more generous initial concession.

92. What are the advantages of adopting a flexible position?

(p. 54)

Can learn about the other party's outcome values and perceived possibilities. Establishes a cooperative rather than combative relationship hoping to get a better agreement. Keeps negotiations going.

93. Discuss the importance of reciprocating (or not reciprocating) concessions.

(p. 55)

Concession making indicates an acknowledgment of the other party and a movement toward the other's position. It implies a recognition of that position and its legitimacy. If the other party does not reciprocate, the concession maker may appear to be weaker by having given up something and received nothing in return. If the giver has made a major concession on a significant point, it is expected that the return offer will be on the same item or one of similar weight and somewhat comparable magnitude. To make an additional concession when none has been received (or when what was given was inadequate) can imply weakness and can squander valuable maneuvering room.

94. What is the disadvantage of letting the absence of further concessions convey the message of the final offer?

(p. 57)

The other party may not recognize at first that the last offer was the final one and might volunteer a further concession to get the other to respond. Finding that no further concession results, the other party may feel betrayed and perceive that the pattern of concession—counter concession was violated.

95. Define commitment.

(p. 58)

"Taking of a bargaining position with some explicit or implicit pledge regarding the future course of action."

96. What are the three properties of commitment statements?

(p. 59)

A high degree of finality, a high degree of specificity, and a clear statement of consequences.

97. List ways to prevent the other party from establishing a committed position.

(p. 62)

Deny them the opportunity to take the time to establish commitments, ignore or downplay the threat by not acknowledging the other's commitment or by making a joke about it, pretend that the other party's statement was not heard or was not understood.

98. How can a negotiator abandon a committed position?

(p. 63)

Word the commitment so that the conditions by which it applied have changed. Let the matter die silently. Make a tentative step in a direction previously excluded by the other's commitment. Restate the commitment in more general terms. Minimize any possible damage to his or her self-esteem or with constituent relationships.

99. What are the risks involved when using hardball tactics?

(p. 66)

Harm to reputation, Losing the deal, Negative publicity, Dealing with the other party's revenge.

100. What are the strategies for responding to hardball tactics?

(p. 66,

67)

Ignore them, discuss them, respond in kind, co-opt the other party. Also discussed in the text but not listed specifically: preparation, familiarity with hardball tactics, identification and discussing the tactics, halting the negotiation process, team negotiations.
